Live broadcast of surgeries in large format

The transmission of surgeries in large format will allow all those attending the course to observe the surgery as if they were in the front row of the operating room.

Together with the Image Department of the Teknon Medical Center, we have designed a set-up that allows us to cover each movement of the surgeon from different angles and with a privileged viewpoint, emitting an enlarged, high-quality image so that attendees can observe every detail, in a much more detailed way than if they were present in the operating room.

This format allows, in addition to observation from different angles, a direct discussion with the observers, who will be able to exchange ideas and observations, and even revisit the most interesting moments.

The transmissions of the two maxillo-mandibular surgeries included in this course will be done in real time.
